1. Introduction

How to Start a Highly Profitable and Successful
Business Advisory, Coaching, and Consulting
Practice

Introduction

How Do You Get Started?

Your first task is to think about your positioning and then evolve a business model to maximize your profitability.

You need to develop a plan that focuses on three key areas.

1. HOW YOU WILL WIN CLIENTS
2. YOUR BUSINESS MODEL
3. A PERSONAL SELF DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

How You Will Win Clients

First Things First

After you have decided on your niche and developed your core marketing plan you need to build a business model that will maximize your profitability.

Backup your positioning with good quality documentation:

- A. That describes you, your practice and your experience
- B. Develop client focused documentation
- C. Start networking and marketing.

Building Your Business Model

The business model must be systemised and leveraged.

The starting point is to focus on your practice positioning. Is there a market area, industry or niche that you wish to specialize in?

The typical drivers of the business model are:

- A. New client acquisition per week/ month/ year
- B. Your conversion rate
- C. Your billing rate
- D. The optimum hours to balance lifestyle with work.

Self Development

You Are Your Greatest Business Asset.

You need to also work on a personal self development plan

This is important to improve your:

1. Experience level
2. Understanding of business & management theory
3. Confidence & networking

Why Do All of This?

Starting a coaching business or adding an advisory arm to your existing practice makes a lot of sense.

1. If you look at your key drivers and configure your practice correctly then you can make hundreds of thousands of dollars out of a very rewarding profession.
 2. There is little inventory and investment cost.
 3. The market is huge
 4. Even in a recession your clients need your services.
 5. If you automate your business then the practice can be leveraged so that it can be built as a multiple person practice.

What is Business Coaching?

The concept of Business Coaching originates from the sporting arena where coaches have for centuries helped athletes achieve their goals.

Coaching is a slightly different concept to consulting, but in a nutshell consulting implies that you identify a problem that a client has and you propose a solution. Coaching is more about the facilitation of a process so that the clients can self help.

The analogy to sport is a good one and also helps us to understand the difference between consulting and coaching.

Imagine a tennis coach for instance. The coach talks to the athlete, shows the athlete where their skill levels are inadequate and then sets over a period of time a plan for the athlete to improve. The plan would enable the athlete to think for him or herself in pressure situations and determine the correct shot to play. This is called coaching.

If the coach on the other hand instructed the athlete to play a particular shot (rather than having the athlete decide on the best shot) or took the tennis racket and played a few sets for the athlete, then this would be an extreme version of consulting.

Business Coaching is about collaboratively seeking a solution and formulating an action plan, looking at broader perspectives and helping develop processes for that business to proceed with. Consulting on the other hand is more defined around problem solving and the suggestion of specific solutions

What is Business Coaching

We should not concern ourselves with trying to define a label as to whether we are performing mentoring, consulting, coaching or facilitation. Our prime goal is to make the client money.

In reality, the more business and consulting experience you have then the more that you will interplay multiple disciplines in the one assignment. You will both coach and at the same time steer your client toward a solution that from your experience you know is the best option. You may mentor and train.

At MAUS, our philosophy is to ignore the constraints of definitions and concentrate on the one thing that your client engaged you to doand that is to make your client money or improve their business.

We provide a framework of business tools that will help you to build your practice. You may start off in a consultative process of preparing a business plan for a client. We then teach you how to convert this consulting assignment into an ongoing coaching assignment by working with the senior managers on implementing their programs.

What Makes a Great Coach

The traits that make a great business coach can be learned

1. Passion – You know what you want and fervently go after it.
2. Confidence – You inspire and compel action.
3. Leadership – You possess the ability to guide your clients to success.
4. Independence – You are a self starter and ready to control your own destiny.
5. Dedication – You are committed to continual improvement of yourself and your clients.

2. Winning Clients

Can you win clients without cold calling? Is there a way to effectively get clients to come to you?

Winning New Clients

Winning new business is getting harder and harder! The question you might ask... is it possible to win new clients without cold calling?

Yes, absolutely. This is what we concentrate on when a new coach joins our network. There are two areas, one is your positioning and the second is your technique.

Winning new clients can be one of the most frustrating, time consuming and expensive elements of your business...and it is one that is often done very poorly.

Without leads and an effective sales conversion system...it doesn't matter how good your internal systems, your personnel and your product is...your business will simply fail.

Work Smarter

What is Relationship Based Education Marketing? It's a marketing method based on the idea of adding value to your prospects.

This is achieved by providing prospects with valuable ideas and helpful information on topics that are most important to them.

The goals are to build trust and establish a dialogue that is not just centered around a sales pitch. The more you don't sell "openly" the more your potential prospects start to trust and want to establish a relationship with your firm.

You do however in the presentation of your information position yourself as an expert. You do this by including references to your stature and standing, past clients or years experience in the field you have chosen to supply information.

But the education can't just be a one off...you must set up a communication plan that keeps you in front of your prospect. This over a period of time convinces your customers that you are the type of firm that they would want to deal with.

Building Trust

By acting as an authority in a niche area you gradually start to build trust with your prospect.

By producing “solution based” educational material you are even able to solicit leads. The goal of this type of marketing is to produce information which you offer in magazines, seminars and PR programs. You offer this information and in return you receive the contact details of your prospects.

But that is where it starts. You have the warm leads but you still have to convert them to a sale. This is where you need to build your communication program and keep offering value. The basis of the communication plan is to continue to refine the prospect down into “problem areas” and to match these “problem areas” with products or services your practice offers. You need to establish good “teaser” information. For example, “7 things to know before buying a car” or “10 things not to do when building a house.”

Education Messages

How do you develop an educational message?

The first step should be to decide who your prospects are. This comes back to your original marketing plan and financial modeling. Those with established businesses will have a good understanding of who their prospects are, those that are starting a business should think long and hard at the outset of who they are trying to attract.

Try not to attract people that you can't convert to a profitable assignment. Think about your end goal, your billing rates and the number of clients you need.

Then you need to get inside the mind of your prospect. Work out every step of their day-to-day routine keeping in mind the product or service that you offer that might be "the solution".

You need to then develop material that contains a "step by step" guide.

Getting the Message Out

Now that you have messaging, how do you get it out to prospects efficiently?

In years past, when I established my consultancy in 1990 we were constrained by seminars, mainstream advertising and expensive mail shots. These days our education material can be broadcast at a very low cost via the internet and through webinars/online workshops, email, and social media. Of course traditional channels such as print advertising can still be utilized as long as they can be cost justified.

Key Takeaways

Key takeaways from this chapter include

1. Provide information in exchange for your prospect's details. The point is to get your prospects details so you can establish trust
2. Create good "teaser" information to encourage prospects to leave their contact details.
- 3. DON'T GIVE A SALES PITCH!

An Effective Action Plan

In order to develop an effective action plan, we suggest you follow these steps

1. The first action item is to develop marketing strategies that identify the opportunities in the marketplace and your positioning.
2. This positioning should then be converted into your elevator pitch and a series of client introduction scripts.
3. You should have backup marketing collateral & material such as brochures and pre-drafted proposals.
4. Client newsletters
5. Client seminar programs.
6. A step-by-step action program including client letters.
7. We will work with you during training on your positioning.

3. A Profitable Niche

What's Hot?

What Are the Hot Segments

What niche is a good fit to grow with?

I have been consulting and coaching to the SME sector for over 22 years.

We are also fortunate at MAUS because we interact with hundreds of business owners each month when we sell them a range of software. We therefore get a feel for what services they are demanding.

I have listed what I feel to be a number of highly demanded segment opportunities for your practice.

Hot Segments

If you have specialist skills, then consulting and coaching in the following areas can be highly profitable

1. Business & Strategic Planning
 2. Exit & Succession Planning
 3. OHS (Occupational Health & Safety)
 4. Monthly accountability & performance management
 5. Quality Assurance
 6. Human Resources (pertaining to legislative requirements and avoiding unfair dismissal rather than general HR.)
 7. Business Valuation

Hot Segments

General Skills

Business Planning – General skills

This segment has and always will be profitable because Business Plans are deadline driven, ie financial institutions and even some government agencies demand that you have one. The segment itself is fairly flat (in terms of year on year growth) until you find a government grant scheme that helps to fund the business advisors' expense. There are a number of grant schemes available at the moment.

Hot Segments

General Skills

Exit & Succession Planning– General skills

This is a good growing segment because of the baby boomers. It is personally a passion of mine as I built MAUS originally and sold it to a multi-national for millions of dollars. So teaching business owners on how to prepare the business for a possible future sale can be very rewarding.

Hot Segments

General Skills

General Business Coaching – General skills

Coaching as opposed to consulting. This is still a growing segment as business owners become more accustomed to the idea of having a business coach.

Profiling the Exit Segment

Exit & Succession Planning Profile

As mentioned I am passionate in the area of Exit & Succession. I was fortunate to have been one of the founding members of the Institute of Exit Advisors and the author of one of Australia's first ever certificate courses the "Exit & Succession Planning" certificate. I was also the first Australian to officially receive formal qualifications in Exit Planning from one of the leading authorities in USA.

I thought it might be opportune to highlight some key facts on this segment.

Exit Segment Profitability

Why is the Exit & Succession Segment Highly Profitable

Consider this, 17% of small business owners are planning to leave their business in the next two years and 40% are aiming to leave in five years. Whether you live in Australia, USA, Canada, NZ, the UK or South Africa the research is the same. There are a massive amount of business owners that will be looking to retire over the coming years.

30%-40% of small business owners in Australia are now over 50 years of age and this rate is increasing each year. In Canada it is estimated that within the next 15 years, more than half of the country's current small business owners will retire. In the US in 2001, 77 million Americans were 50 and older (comprising 28% of the population). By 2020 that segment will be 36% of the population.

Exit Segment Profitability

Why is the Exit & Succession Segment Highly Profitable

There is no doubt that, as the baby boomers near retirement and the average age of small business owners increases, the age-old laws of supply and demand will come into play. In such a crowded marketplace business owners will need to present their business in an appealing, professional manner to stand out from the competition and achieve the maximum return.

In Australia 66% of business owners plan to use their business as their primary source of retirement income; 43% aim to realize a lump sum benefit from the business; and 31% expect an income stream.

For these people selling the business in order to retire, it is of paramount importance that the sale price will allow them to retire comfortably and not compromise their quality of life.

Exit Segment Profitability

Why is the Exit & Succession Segment Highly Profitable

Research shows 70% of businesses think succession and exit strategy planning is important but only 12% have a documented plan. Unsurprisingly, the main motivating factor for the creation of a plan is age. A major impediment to succession planning is that most entrepreneurs don't understand the drivers that underpin the creation of an exit strategy.

Selling a business is a marketing exercise that requires planning, preparation and a compelling pitch. An exit strategy needs to be achievable and have a realistic timeframe and measurable milestones.

4. Bussiness Model

Can you win clients without cold calling? Is there a way to effectively get clients to come to you?

Coaching Business Model

Understanding the coaching business model

I would recommend a “coaching” type business model as a profitable methodology to grow your business. (This business model is a recurring revenue open ended engagement as opposed to taking a “one-off” fee)

The “coaching” business model is a slightly different concept to a “consulting” business model...it is more profitable because it is based on recurring revenue...and that is what I like about it...

Previously we discussed that consulting implies that you identify a problem that a client has and you propose a solution. Coaching is more about the introduction of a process so that clients can self-help. You act as a facilitator.

Coaching Business Model

Understanding the coaching business model

In reality, (please note here that the coaching institutes around the world will call me a heretic!) the more business and consulting experience you have then the more that you will interplay both disciplines in the one assignment. You will both coach and at the same time steer your client toward a solution that from your experience you know is probably the best option.

The more inexperienced and naïve your client the more you will be willing to provide a solution.

The more sophisticated your client and the more involved or complex the issues the more you will lead them through the processes.

In addition, there will be times where you engage your client on an initial problem-solving exercise and then turn this into a monthly ongoing coaching assignment.

...it is the model of coaching that is profitable

Coaching Business Model

The important part about the model of coaching is that it can dramatically increase the profitability of your business.

As a consultancy, you would normally need to build your practice by finding people with a problem that you could solve.

For example:

- 1. Do you need a business plan? We can solve your problem by charging you $5k-$20k.
- 2. Do you have people issues or compliance issues? We can develop a plan for $5-$20k.

Coaching Business Model

The important part about the model of coaching is that it can dramatically increase the profitability of your business.

In the typical CONSULTING SCENARIO

You need to:

1. Find a client with the problem.
2. Find a client that can be convinced to part with $5-$20k.
3. Find a client that is convinced you are the right person to solve the problem.

Coaching Business Model

Understanding the coaching business model

...Coaching broadens your market and has the perceived lower price

Coaching on the other hand broadens your entire market and offers you a different framework to market your services.

In coaching your marketing communication is all about..."Have you achieved what you wanted to achieve?" In most cases the answer to this will be NO. That leaves you with the response (after identifying why)... "perhaps I can help by acting as a business coach."

Your methodology then revolves around conducting business diagnostics, reporting on weaknesses and then developing goals and actions. From a billing perspective you bill on a regular monthly basis.

You provide regular management guidance that covers broader issues and problem solving along the way.

Business coaching charge rates

The typical charge rates vary from $500 per month to $3,000 per month.

Attracting New Clients

The “nuts & bolts” of attracting new clients

How do you build a relationship?

Let's assume you have selected the right prospect group, one that is more likely to lead to profitable future consulting work.

STEP 1

Sit down and think about what your clients are asking themselves every day about their particular problems and possible solutions. If you are stuck, find a few people that you know that are in this “niche group” and survey them on their interests, problems and frustrations.

Attracting New Clients

The “nuts & bolts” of attracting new clients

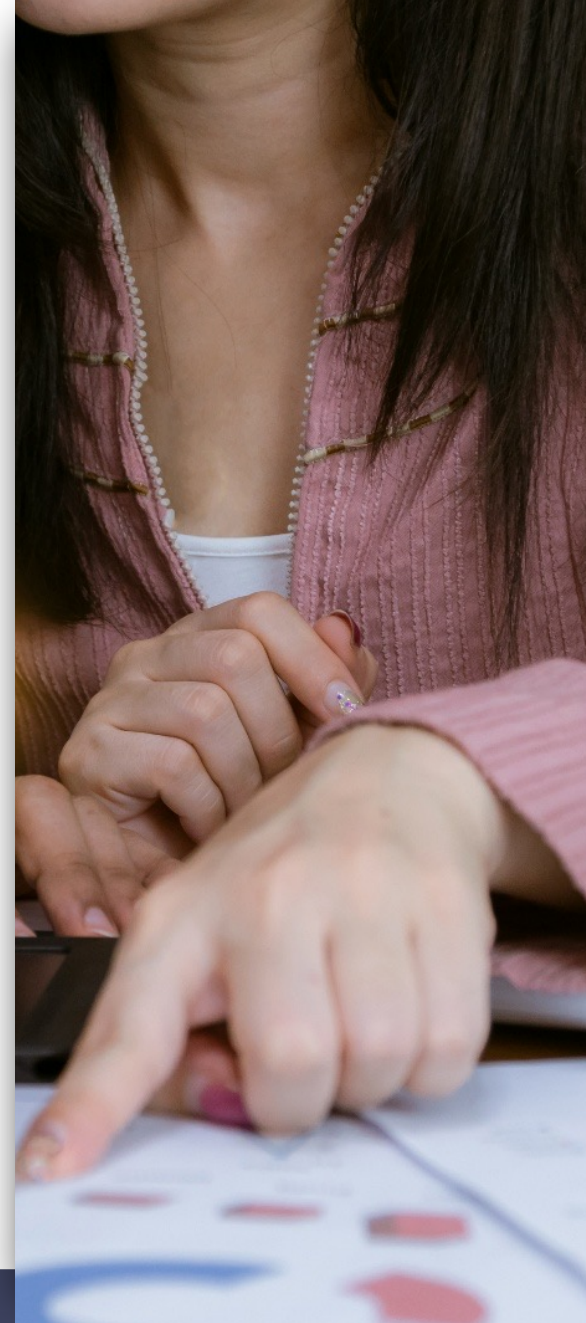

STEP 2

If you hear something from a couple of people you can rest assured that there are hundreds more out there that are asking the same question. This therefore gives you an opportunity to produce some literature to answer those questions.

STEP 3

Write about 400-600 words. Bundle the literature in attractive packaging... article heading along the lines of 7 secrets to financing.

NO SALES PITCHES

Attracting New Clients

STEP 4

Disseminate the information. a) Put it on your website, b) Send it to your prospects, c) Send it to magazines

STEP 5

Call the magazines. Speak to the editor of your niche area. Offer to be an authority reference point and provide more details. Offer more information to their readers and provide a tool or further information that they can download in exchange for their email address.

What They're Saying

About the Maus Coaching Program

John Dawkins

The Business Register

"I was blown away by the detail and sheer volume of the resources available to MAUS network members.

To try and create all of this would have cost me thousands of dollars and time I simply didn't have available."

Probing Clients for Info

The key to successful client interaction is the right questioning technique.

Types of questions:

An open-ended question requires a general response whereas a closed-ended question can be answered with a simple "Yes," "No," or other very simple answers.

Probing Clients for Info

Types of questions

In a typical client or prospect interview would

1. Start off with Open Questions:

- a. How did you go last month?
- b. How is Business?

2. Then you ask more specific probing questions:

- a. Oh, that is no good, what happened?
- b. I am glad business is good, what do you think is the key to your success?

3. You could then ask a closed question followed up with the words WHY or HOW:

- a. Did you meet your budget last month?
- b. Oh really, WHY or WHY NOT

Probing Clients for Info

Types of questions

Be intuitive during a client or prospect interview

Make sure you listen. If your questions are pre-formulated your client or prospect would lose interest. The biggest tip...pretend you are in a bar talking to a friend. If your friend says I have marriage problems you don't follow up with "Oh really what sports do you like?" It would be offensive. You have to ask..."Oh really, I am sorry to hear that, what is going wrong?"

The same listening skills and empathy need to apply to your client probing and networking.

Question Funnel

Types of questions

- ✓ The question funnel is all about finding the right BUTTONS to press.
 - ✓ The process involves asking lots of questions up front, then targeting your presentation.

The 4 basic funnels in networking you can open are:

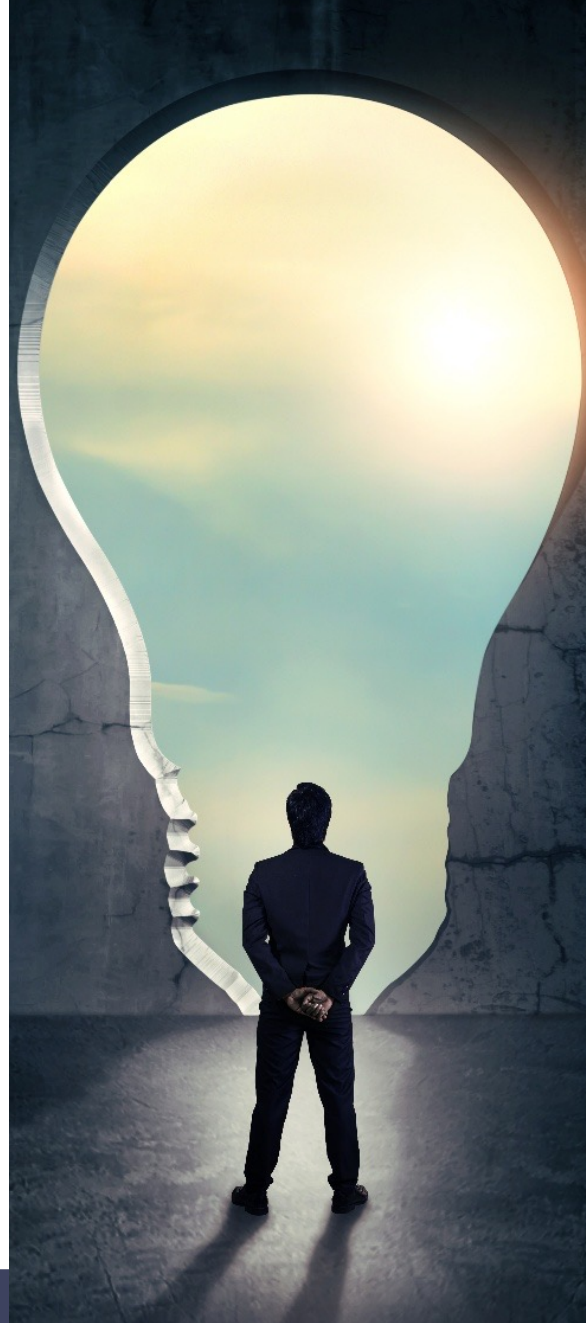

1. Family
2. Work
3. Recreation
4. Motivation

The Process

What's next?

- ✓ Pre-frame the funnel with a motivator to help them understand what you are trying to achieve.
- ✓ Ask open general questions, looking for the issues.
- ✓ When you spot an issue, use exploratory questions to narrow down.
- ✓ Use the closing question to pinpoint their needs
- ✓ The summary is to show them that you truly understand
- ✓ The Sweeper is to confirm nothing has been missed.

How to Add Coaching

How does a consultant add coaching to their existing business

So, there are two major things you will need to do if you are to start a business coaching practice or transform your existing practice.

You will need to improve your understanding of the coaching process, you will need to study and understand the marketing process (how to win clients) and how you gear your company towards this opportunity, and you will need to implement a set of systems and processes to transform your business.

Fortunately, we have done most of the hard work for you. I would suggest you contact us and set up a free coaching session. We will examine your skills, give you some free advice and point you in the right direction.

How to Add Coaching

How does a consultant add coaching to their existing business

For years accountants have been trying to diversify their business away from just compliance work. In fact, business coaching can be highly rewarding and highly profitable.

We have recently talked with 5 practices (2-5 partners) that have all decided that they want to get into the area of "management guidance and advice".

The biggest barriers stopping any accountancy firm from moving into this area is confidence, processes and the gearing of the business.

Out of the five practices that we recently held talks with, all had geared their business so that one of the partners had more time available to expand the practice in a new area. But each was holding back because the partner was not feeling confident enough to dive into the area of business coaching.

Building Confidence

Do not reinvent the wheel. The proper processes build confidence proven structure for client satisfaction and practice growth

YOU NEED TO GET YOUR PRACTICE READY FOR TAKE-OFF. THAT MEANS:

- ✓ Creating time for the partner or person that will be responsible.
- ✓ Understanding the business model that will maximize value to clients and the practice.
- ✓ Short listing the services, fees and engagement model that will be deployed.
- ✓ Build marketing programs and scripts around the proposed service.
- ✓ Build confidence and competence with the advisors that will be offering the services to the clients.
- ✓ Practice on "safe" clients at reduced or no fees
- ✓ Launch

Make sure you do not re-invent the wheel. There are different types of business models that can be deployed. Don't get bogged down with a model that will leave you and your firm frustrated.

Use technology to minimize back-office tasks, systemize the service and impress your client.

6. How to Start this Practice Overnight

Proven structure and methodologies

Starting Overnight

How do you start a business consultancy and coaching business overnight?

After looking through this ebook it should become obvious that in order to be successful you will need to spend a lot of time and effort in generating the right client material and literature.

You will need to develop a business model that will work, while at the same time it doesn't matter how good your material and business model is if you do not have the confidence.

How can you fast-track your practice...???

If you want to start your practice overnight and have a great chance at being successful, then I suggest you join our MAUS network or at the very minimum invest in some of our MAUS software.

Starting Overnight
